Season Epilogue

Haven

Many from Tower were injured in the damages done. Cassius was the only permanent loss that was had, 4 others successfully resurrected in the new earth circle. The clinic has been working to heal those who were injured. Over 150 people have been displaced because of the Jester and Vreech.

The night right after the events at Tower Marcus and many other Havenites come to Bastion. They request to be allowed to live within Bastion and become a more integrated part of the town. They feel like this is necessary for everyone's safety. With them they were able to bring some of the food stores they had as well as some tools and other supplies.

Marcus states that the main reason they never joined before is that there were concerns of how the town was run. One of the conditions they state, for becoming part of Bastion, is that there be a position on the council where a Havenite is seated. They do not require that position to have a vote in any matters, unless needed. The reasoning for this is because there needs to be a flow of information back to the other Havens about what is going on in Bastion since so many Havenites have chosen to stay here. He states that this is something the Elemental Council requests. If this condition is not able to be met then a majority of the Havenites would return to the other two Havens, while those that choose to stay would not be able to speak for Haven in any way.

Chaos on the Rise

Reports from scouts have been trickling in about the Chaos Elemental that escaped the mines. Undead have been seen wandering in areas the Elemental has been spotted. It is believed that they were created to be a distraction. With its ability to rift it is hard to pinpoint a location where it may be hiding.

A letter from Song of Life is brought to Bastion.

Citizen of Bastion,

I apologize if what I said to all of you seemed as if I were angry with you. As I said, the escape of the Chaos Elemental is not your fault. I do not believe at this time you are equipped to handle this at this time. Though your skills are many, you do not all have a full understanding of Necromancy.

Myself and the other Elementals are working on a plan to try to end this threat to you and everyone in this realm. Please be cautious in any attempts to open the Elemental realms to this one. As much as we wish to return to our original homes, this realm has been home for thousands of years. We do not wish to see undue harm come to this realm.

If we find any information that may be able to assist you in removing this threat, be assured it will be sent. For now, if you see the elemental it may be something that all of you will need to work together to hold off. If I feel a large amount of Chaos magic I will attempt to assist however I am able.

Song of Life

The Fall of the True Collegium

Raynard is dead, Luca is in chains, and the rest of the conspirators on the surface are dead or captured. A former Collegium soldier identified as Capt. Robert Ebner, but known to his fellow conspirators as The Quartermaster has been captured. However the man known as Lindaris ,Chief Librarian of the Collegium and all evidence shows as the leader of the Truer Collegium on the surface, has escaped capture.

The plot of the True Collegium has been fully unraveled. They planned to use ritual magic to try to lure Vreech into town and then stage their coup, slaying many of Bastion's defenders in the process. Luckily this plan was discovered and disrupted before it could start.

The good boy squad has searched Bastion and determined that Lindaris isn't in the town anymore. It is unknown whether he has fled into the wilderness surrounding Bastion or if he managed to smuggle himself back into the relative safety of the Cairn and has taken shelter with his supporters still underground.

Now the People of Bastion must decide what to do with these captured conspirators.
